

Haemeroids Private Treatment: Ways In Which Medical Malpractice Claim May Result From Delayed Diagnosis of Colon Cancer

Being told one has colon cancer tends to raise fear in most of people. It can therefore feel quite reassuring for your doctor let you know that you just have hemorrhoids and there is no need to worry about the blood vessels in your stool. Yet this reassurance must not be given until the doctor has ruled out the chance of colon cancer (and other potentially serious gastrointestinal issues). Otherwise, you might not discover that you have colon cancer until it is too late. Should a health care provider decide without testing assumes that claims of blood in the stool or rectal bleeding by a patient are due to hemorrhoids and it subsequently is discovered that the patient had colon cancer all along, that doctor might not have met the standard of care as well as the patient might have a legal claim against that physician.

As far as an external hemorrhoid treatment goes, the one you choose to use depends on the severity and uniqueness of your specific case. Everyone's bodies are different and for that reason require different treatments. There are simple steps you can take initially to help reduce some of your symptoms such as taking care of your hygiene from morning until night. Your anal region must be kept clean at all times, not allowing unwanted and potentially dangerous bacteria to form and aggravate your condition. If you allow this to happen you're welcoming in a whole new host of problems you won't want to deal with so you need to stay clean as often as you possibly can in that area of the body.

So how would a natural hemorrhoid remedy deal completely with hemorrhoids? Since there are actually only three or four main causes for hemorrhoids, the answer lies in going to the source and basically doing things differently, with a little help from nature.

The Next is Non Surgical Hemorrhoid Treatment Called Sclerotherapy

This is a process in which a chemical compound is injected to the hemorrhoid. What happens is just about the same with the first method mentioned. The blood supply is cut and the hemorrhoid will shrink. This method is said to be best used for recurring hemorrhoids.

“ But, if the cancer is not discovered until it has spread beyond the intestinal tract and has reached the lymph nodes, the patient's five 12 months tactical rate will generally be around 53%. As well as surgery in order to remove the tumor and adjacent portions of the digestive tract treatment for this stage of colon cancer calls for chemotherapy in an attempt to remove any cancer that might be left in the body. If the cancer spreads to other organs for example the liver, lungs, or brain, the individuals 5 year survival rate is reduced in order to near 8%. If treatment options exist for a patient at this stage, they may include surgery, chemotherapy, radiation therapy, and other medications. Treatment may or may not still be helpful as soon as the cancer is this advanced. If treatment ceases to be effective, colon cancer is lethal. This year, about 48,000 individuals will die in the U.S. from colon cancer metastasis.

As a result of diagnosing issues of blood in the stool or rectal bleeding as caused by hemorrhoids while not doing the correct tests to rule out colon cancer, a physician puts the patient at risk of not learning he or she has colon cancer until it progresses in order to an advanced, possibly no longer treatable, stage. This could amount to a departure from the recognized standard of medical care and might bring about a medical malpractice claim.

Colon cancer is found while still contained within the intestinal tract, the patient's chances of surviving the cancer are over 80%. The 5 year survival rate is a statistical guage of the percentage of individuals who are still alive a minimum of 5 years subsequent to analysis. Treatment protocols for early stage colon cancer generally calls for only surgery so as to take out the cancerous growth and surrounding areas of the colon. Subject to factors such as the stage of the cancer and the patient's medical history (including family medical history), age, and the patient's physical condition, chemotherapy may or may not be required.

As far as the quick fix for pain and itching is concerned, nature also provides in the form of herbal remedies, sitz baths and believe it or not, ice chips. These methods not only work fast, but they are safe. This is particularly good news for pregnant women who need to be careful when using medications.

- Anyone had told me 20 years ago that you could get rid of hemorrhoids for ever, I would have thought they were living in fantasy land.
- Even more bizarre would have been the idea that this could be accomplished by a natural hemorrhoid treatment.
- Such things just did not exist in those days.
- All we had were creams, cushions, patches, or if the situation was extreme, surgery.
- Hemorrhoids, so we were told, were to be accepted as a part of life.

Is generally believed that there are currently at least 10 million people with hemorrhoids and another million new cases of hemorrhoids will probably occur this year. In contrast, a little more than the 100 1000 new occurrences of colon cancer that will be diagnosed this year. Further, colon cancers do not always. In the event that they do, the bleeding could be intermittent. And based on where the cancer is in the colon, the blood might not even be apparent in the stool. Perhaps it is in part as a result of the difference in the amount of instances being determined that some doctors basically take into account that the existence of blood in the stool or rectal bleeding is due to hemorrhoids.

This Amounts to Playing the Odds

A physician who reaches this conclusion will be proper a lot more than 90% of the time. It seems reasonable, does not it? The problem, nonetheless, is that when the physician will be incorrect in this diagnosis, the patient may not discover he or she has colon cancer until it has advanced to an advanced phase, perhaps even to the point where treatment is no longer effective.

After dealing with hemorrhoids for 20 years and finding absolutely no solutions, other than expensive, lifelong "band aids" in the pharmaceutical realm, I decided to rescue their life from the norm and see if there were other treatments available.

Any person, whether he is physically active or not, would not want to have anything to do with hemorrhoids. Unfortunately, anyone is a target and there is no exception. Developing a hemorrhoid can cause great concern and discomfort and failing to have it treated may lead to serious problems such as hemorrhaging and severe anemia. Many people choose to postpone treatment because they refuse to have surgery. Little do they know that there are available non surgical hemorrhoid treatment approaches which anybody can avail.

Yes, Hemorrhoids Tend to be Painful, Irritating and Embarrassing

People want a quick fix for that. This is where the creams come in, and they do work. Except they do not stop the hemorrhoids from coming back. Would it not make more sense to find out what is causing them and deal with that once and for all?

My hemorrhoid story will jolt you, but you need to read it if you want to save yourself time, money, and painful disappointment.

First of all let's begin by examining the specific reasons why people develop exterior hemorrhoids. The first reason is a generic predisposition to them which is passed down from one or both of your parents at birth, this is something you have no control over. The second most common reason people develop external hemorrhoids is because of their dietary patterns and eating habits. People sometimes consume vast amounts of foods which are hard for the body to digest, sometimes leading to hemorrhoids. Pressure that is put on the veins leads to them bursting, therefore causing blood loss in the body which usually presents on toilet paper after all of us use the lavatory.

The First Option is Known as the Rubber Band Treatment or Baron Ligation

This is a procedure in which the external hemorrhoid is tied with a rubber band. Sometimes, this procedure does not require a physician. The trouble is that if you go to practitioners of alternative medicine, there is a likelihood of getting contamination. When using this method is done, the hemorrhoid is cut with its supply of bloodstream and will eventually wilt, shrink, and fall off. So far, this is the cheapest known non surgical hemorrhoid treatment.

This is why doctors generally recommend that a colonoscopy ought to be ordered instantly if someone complains of blood in the stool or rectal bleeding. A colonoscopy is a procedure whereby a flexible scope with a camera on the end is used to see the interior of the colon. If growths (polyps or tumors) are detected, they can be taken out (if sufficiently small) or sampled and analyzed for the presence of cancer (by biopsy). Providing no cancer is detected during the colonoscopy may colon cancer be ruled out as a cause of the blood.

The third popular method in treating or treating hemorrhoid is via using infrared technology. This is different from laser treatment. The goal of this method is also in order to prevent the flow of blood to the hemorrhoid. This is best applied only to small hemorrhoids that are bleeding in nature. Big hemorrhoids require a different type of treatment. Although there are many other non surgical hemorrhoid treatment methods, these three methods tend to be the most popular and least expensive ways to cure it.
